GLOBAL SPACE RACE
WHERE DOES INDIA STAND?

Rishikesh Kumar

Rwanda has filed with the International Telecommunications Union (ITU) a proposal for a low earth orbit satellite constellation with 327320 satellites. Lying south of the equator in east-central Africa, Rwanda does not have a satellite industry, and it has built only two CubeSats to date. Then why did a small land-locked country seek ITU's permission to launch almost a third of a million satellites? Observers consider this as an attempt to establish that not all of Low Earth Orbit gets owned by America and allies. The U.N. body ITU plays a crucial role in allocating satellite orbits that are increasingly in demand from a large and growing number of services such as fixed, mobile, broadcasting, amateur, space research, and emergency telecommunications, meteorology, global positioning systems, environmental monitoring, and other communication services.

Meanwhile, James Frederick Bridenstine, an American politician who served as the 13th Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), made an essential remark during the Senate Space and Science Subcommittee Hearing on 21 October. He said NASA has invited countries "that don't even have a space program to participate in Artemis in whatever small way they can participate." Artemis Program is a US-led international human spaceflight program under which NASA plans to return humans to the Moon, specifically the lunar south pole, by 2024. "Space is a tool of diplomacy for this country, and it's something that every country wants, and we can help provide it," Bridenstine said before the Senate. Besides Bridenstine, other speakers such as Patricia Sanders, head of NASA's Aerospace Safety and Advisory Panel, and Mike Gold, Executive Vice President for Civil Space and External Affairs Redwire Space, underscored the need for around $2 billion per year funding for projects in low earth orbit, such as the International Space Station (ISS), from the government. The ISS has been flying for more than 20 years and may stay operational into 2030 if Congress agrees to NASA's request to fund the station beyond the currently approved 2024. Mary Lynne Dittmar, executive vice president of Axiom Space, in response to a question on what happens if the ISS retires before a U.S. replacement is flying, notes that China already has a space station flying and American companies are "beginning to lose customers to China.'

Nidhi Prasad

What is an archive?

An archive is a collection of documents or records which have been selected for permanent preservation owing to their value as evidence or as a source of information for cultural, historical and other research. The word 'archive' is derived from the Greek word 'arkheion' meaning public office or town hall in which important official state documents were filed and interpreted under the authority of the Archon (ruler or lord, frequently used as the title of a specific public office). Major takeaways for India from G20 Summit

EN Team

The G20 summit concluded on 31st October 2021 with member countries adopting the G20 Rome Leaders' Declaration. This was the 8th G20 Summit since 2014 and first in-person Summit since the Osaka Summit in 2019. The theme of the Summit held under Italian Presidency was 'People, Planet, Prosperity', with an overarching theme of recovery from the pandemic across pillars of health, economy, employment, education, tourism, and climate action. Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi participated in all 3 Summit Sessions - on Global Economy and Global Health; Climate Change and Environment, and Sustainable Development. A lot of the agenda of developing countries, in which India has been taking a leadership role, has been brought into the text of the G20 Rome Leaders' Declaration.

COVID-19: 'One Earth, One Health'

G-20 nations have endorsed India's position that extensive COVID immunisation is a global public good. Member countries have agreed on mutual recognition of vaccines, strengthening of the WHO to give faster approvals to vaccines and suspending debt servicing for developing countries till December 2021. In his intervention, Prime Minister Modi highlighted India's contribution to the fight against COVID-19 and spoke about New Delhi's vision of 'One Earth, One Health' saying this vision can become a great strength for the world to deal with any such crisis in the future. Mr. Modi conveyed that India is ready to produce over 5 billion vaccine doses by the end of next year. The G20 also acknowledged the importance of shared standards for seamless travel including testing requirements and results, vaccination certificates and mutual recognition of digital applications. India has been a strong advocate for equitable and affordable access to COVID-19 disease control tools, including vaccines and diagnostics through technology transfer, diversification of supply chains and production house.

Climate Goals

For the first time, the global leaders have identified sustainable and responsible consumption and production as "critical enablers" in achieving energy and climate goals. This is in line with Prime Minister Narendra Modi's vision of promoting the mantra of sustainable lifestyles all over the world.

Instead of only focusing on climate goals, India along with other developing countries was able introduce a language on what actions need to be taken, including by developed countries, to achieve these goals. The developing countries opposed the "inequitable call for net-zero by 2050" while noting a "lack of ambition" vis-a-vis climate goals on the part of major developed countries and their attempt to shift the goalposts of the Paris Agreement. Developed nations still have a much bigger carbon footprint than their poorer counterparts.

Commerce Minister and India's G20 Sherpa, Piyush Goyal said that India has pushed for the inclusion of the principle of Common but Differentiated Responsibilities and Respective Capabilities (CBDR-RC), enshrined in the UNFCCC and the Paris Agreement, as the basis for climate action. "India pushed for an explicit recognition that the goal of developed countries making available $100 bn per annum through 2020 has not been achieved, is expected to be met no later than 2023", he added.

Another commitment made by the G20 in the direction of sustainable development is that the developed nations will put an end to the provision of international public finance for new unabated coal power generation abroad by the end of 2021. Instead, they will mobilize international public and private finance to support green, inclusive, and sustainable development.

Global Supply Chain Repair

The G-20 also responded to the mounting challenge of disrupted global supply chains. The globalized trade system is still reeling from the COVID-19 pandemic, leading to shortages and misaligned trade routes around the world.

During the Global Supply Chain Summit on the sidelines of the G20 Summit, Prime Minister Narendra Modi asserted that trusted sources, transparency and time-frame are three vital fields that regulate the global supply chain. Recollecting how during the initial months of the pandemic, countries felt the shortage of raw materials to produce vaccines, health equipment and essential medicines, Mr Modi noted that in the pursuit of economic recovery after the pandemic also, the supply problems of semiconductors and other commodities are coming in the way of healthy growth.

"I believe that three aspects are most important to improve global supply chains - trusted source, transparency and time-frame. It is necessary that our supply must be from trusted sources. It is also important for our shared security. Trusted sources must be such that they do not have a reactive tendency so that the supply chain is protected from a tit for tat approach. For the reliability of the supply chain, it is also necessary that there must be transparency in it. Due to lack of transparency, today we are seeing that many companies in the world are facing the shortage of small things. If there is no timely supply of essential things, it may lead to bigger losses. We have clearly realized this in pharma and medical supplies in the Corona times. So to ensure supply within a time-frame, we have to diversify our supply chains. And for this, alternative manufacturing capacity will have to be developed in developing countries." - PM Narendra Modi during the Global Summit on Supply Chain Resilience.

SPOTLIGHT

India has accelerated the export of vaccines to improve the global supply of vaccines. India is also working with Quad partners to supply better and affordable Covid-19 vaccine in the Indo-Pacific region. India is gearing up to produce 5 billion COVID vaccine doses for the world next year for which it is important that there is no hindrance in the supply of raw material.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi stated that while India is already a trusted source in IT and Pharma supply chains, it is keen to participate in the clean technology supply chain.

Farmers and Food Security

Another major takeaway for India and other developing countries is that the leaders have agreed in-principle to focus on improving the livelihoods of small and marginal farmers. India had insisted that policies must protect the interest of small and marginal farmers and conserve local food cultures, which in turn, will ensure food security. This calls for global efforts to foster sustainable and resilient food systems and agriculture innovations which are vital to eliminate hunger and poverty. The G20 Summit endorsed the Matera Declaration which calls upon the international community to build inclusive and resilient food chains and ensure adequate nutrition for all, in line with the "Zero Hunger" goal set for 2030. The Matera Declaration was adopted by the first joint meeting of the Foreign Affairs and Development Ministers of the G20 in June this year. The declaration focused on "accelerating the adaptation of agriculture and food systems to climate change, as increased climate variability and extreme weather events impact agriculture output and are among the forces driving the rise in global hunger while recognizing the importance of sustainable agriculture."

Global minimum corporate tax

G20 leaders have formally endorsed the global agreement for a minimum 15% corporate tax. The new tax regime will come into force in 2023, making it harder for multinationals to avoid taxation by shifting jobs and profits into low-tax havens. Information Technology has lowered barriers for trading without physical presence in a region. Historically, countries have sought to tax businesses conducted within their territories. This has been shaken up by the blistering pace of the internet. Hence, the new global taxation policy will also address the increasing digitalisation of global commerce by companies, in part, based on where they do business instead of where they book profits. The idea of levying a global 15 percent minimum corporate tax on companies that will make the global financial architecture more fair and just was first proposed by Prime Minister Narendra Modi at the G-20 Summit way back in 2014, according to Foreign Secretary Harsh Vardhan Shringla.

"This is a very important step in ensuring more rationalised tax structures, and better cooperation in the international domain when it comes to issues like tax evasion, money laundering, corruption"- Foreign Secretary Harsh Vardhan Shringla

The G-20 Summit, an annual conference of leaders from 20 of the world's most influential countries, is meant as a forum for leaders to solve pressing economic and global issues. The group played an instrumental role in responding to the 2008 financial crisis and is a place of dialogue for major countries to negotiate on issues like trade, climate change, international security and, most recently, the COVID-19 pandemic.

defects and determine if the material can be included in collections. An archivist should have a methodical approach to work with a knack for accuracy.

- Preserving skills: An archivist should have the knowledge about storing and conservation techniques from various time periods. Certain material needs specific environmental conditions, so an archivist monitors the storage space and security arrangements required for long-term protection of the materials.
- Customer service skills: An archivist makes material available to the public through scans and copies. Generally, they will help persons who want to access the archives to retrieve information or do research.

- Computer Skills: Working knowledge of computers and similar gadgets

How to become an archivist?

Other than a degree in archival science, a person holding a degree in subjects like history, political science, library science, public administration are considered for the position of an archivist. The minimum qualification to get a bachelor's degree in the aforementioned subjects is 10+2. Students having science and medical background can also pursue reprography – a specialized discipline related to archival science.

On completing a bachelor's degree in archival science or related disciplines, one can further enrol in MA, M.Phil, and PhD programs in the same subject. Certain institutions offer other courses, such as PG Certificate in Archives, PG Diploma in Archive-Keeping, PG Diploma in Archives, Documentation and Management, PG Diploma in Archival Science and Manuscriptology, and PG Diploma in Archival Studies. Some short-term certificate courses in servicing, and repair of records, reprography, and archives management are also conducted. The basic idea behind enrolling in such courses is to gain knowledge of basic archival theory, methods, and/or practice of appraisal, including records management, aspects of library and information science management, and historical and research methods.

The School of Archival Studies, formerly known as the Institute of Archival Training set up in 1976 by National Archives of India is one of the most prestigious institutes in India for archival studies. Other reputed institutions offering Certificate and Diploma courses in Archival Science and related disciplines include:

- National Museum Institute of History of Art, Conservation and Museology, Delhi–nmi.gov.in
- School of Archival Studies, National Archives of India, Delhi–nationalarchives.nic.in

- Osmania University, Hyderabad- osmania.ac.in
- Banaras Hindu University, Varanasi-bhu.ac.in

Why are archives important?

Archives have value to nations and regions, organisations, communities, and individual people. They provide evidence of activities which occurred in the past, they tell stories, document people and identity and are valuable sources of information for research. They are our recorded memory and form an important part of our community, cultural, official and unofficial history.

Archive collections are usually unique, which is why it is so important to take proper care of them. They need to be carefully stored and managed to protect and preserve them for current and future use. Archives are also kept by other institutions, including museums and libraries. Sometimes archival collections are kept in other locations such as religious organisations, universities, schools, businesses, charities, arts organisations and community groups that often hold their own institutional records.

The National Archives of India (NAI) is the official custodian of all non-current records of the Government of India and its predecessor bodies. These records are preserved in any type of document forms like books, papers, letters, written manuscripts, maps, plans, diaries, electronic records, photographs, clippings, video and sound recordings, and films drawings, photocopied and microfilmed material and so on. Nowadays, historians, scholars, genealogists, lawyers, biographers, independent writers, documentary filmmakers, demographers, students, analysts and also administrative departments take advantage of archival sources.

Today, almost every field needs an archivist to store its valuable records and documents in a professional manner. Out of the enormous distinct opportunities available to make a flourishing career in, one can opt for archival science and become a successful archivist.

The terms-museums, archives and libraries may be confusing. All these are cultural institutions, concerned with the collection and preservation of cultural heritage that holds a unique position in any modern state. The three fields work together to document all flavours and varieties of history with a single purpose, but each has its own discipline, own programs of training, and bodies of literature. While Museums focus on historical artefacts and objects; Libraries specializes in managing published materials likes books, magazines etc, and Archives focuses on historical records. Although archival collections can often be found within library buildings, they are quite distinct from libraries with regard to their functions and organization.

The term archives can mean different things and can be defined in three ways namely;

- Historical record collections: These are groups of records like papers, documents, files, photographs and other similar materials collected and preserved by an individual or organization.
- Repositories (Physical facilities): Here archives refer to a physical location or facility like a building or part of a building where archival records are located
- Organizations: Archives may also mean an organization, program or agency that is responsible for managing and preserving historical records.

Though archives are found in many different contexts, all archival programs have the same fundamental goal; i.e., preservation of records about history and cultural heritage.

Career Prospects

Archivists can find openings in various organizations such as:

- Museums
- Government agencies
- Colleges and universities
- Industrial and commercial firms
- Hospitals
- Historical societies
- Corporations and any institution whose records may potentially be valuable to researchers, exhibitors, genealogists, or others
- National Archives of India, an attached office of the Ministry of Culture, which manages all the important documents and archives of the nation offer various job opportunities to qualified candidates in its various units.
- Indian Council for Historical Research appoints candidates to various posts including Archivists, Assistant Archivists, Director of Archives, Assistant Director of Archives for Records and Publication and Keeper of Records.

Employment of archivists is projected to grow 8 percent from 2019 to 2029, much faster than the average for all occupations. Demand for archivists is expected to increase, as public and private organizations require that more volumes of records and information be organized and made accessible.

GLOBAL SPACE RACE ...

The Chinese Space Station is in orbit, demonstrating significant progress and attracting international partners. The construction of the space station will be completed by the end of 2022. "Humanity is only at the beginning of understanding the immense economic, technological, and medicinal value of microgravity, and America is at risk of ceding these capabilities to our greatest competitor," Jim Bridenstine said on 21 October. The American concerns seem to be valid in the context of the number of launches China carried out this year. China recently completed its 39th space launch in 2021, tying with a historical record of 39 launches set in 2018 and 2020. The Chinese space station is likely to do "thousands of experiments" in micro-gravity and could accept request from countries unable to reach the international space station.

When world powers are accelerating their space ambitions, Space launches by Indian Space Research Organization (ISRO) has decreased dramatically. In 2021, ISRO carried out only two launches, while 2 in 2020 and 6 in 2019. The U.S. touched a maximum launch of 31 in 2018, while Russia had 29 launches in 2015. India's Economic Survey 2020-21 data reveals China has outpaced all the countries in the world as it has been aggressively pushing its program to create newer technologies and diplomacy in the last few years.

Where does India stand?

China's space program began in 1956 with studies of placing a satellite into orbit, while India's program was initiated in the 1960s. Both the countries had started their program with an ambition to utilize the space for civilian purposes as it was application-driven, and policies of the two countries aimed toward helping their sizeable poor population. However, the gaps between the two countries widened in the late 1990s and early years of 21st century, with China increasing its expenditure on space, aiming to counter the U.S. in this arena. India's Economic Survey 2020-21, presented before the Parliament in January this year, states that the U.S. spent ten times more than India in space technology, while China's expenditure was six times more. India's annual space expenditure is only around $1.8 billion, while China spent over $11 billion a year on its space program. The U.S. spent $19.5 billion on the space sector besides massive investment by private firms like Amazon and Elon Musk's SpaceX.

To keep up with China in the space race, leaders of the Quad, comprising of Australia, India, Japan, and the United States, agreed on 24 September 2021 that they would work on developing norms, guidelines, rules, and principles that would ensure the sustainable use of outer space.

On 24 September, Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi and U.S. President Joe Biden also agreed to finalize a "Space Situational Awareness Memorandum of Understanding by the end of 2021," facilitating data sharing and sharing of services to ensure long-term sustainability of outer space. Nevertheless, India has not made any announcement so far whether it will join the Artemis Accord of the U.S. or not. Artemis Accord, joined by 12 countries so far including Japan, Australia, UAE and the U.K., is an agreement for lunar exploration and beyond, with the participation of both international partners and commercial players.

"Given the high costs of space exploration, there should be cooperation between various space agencies. India has had a good relationship with NASA and Russia's Glavkosmos and took both these agencies' help when needed. India should continue with this policy and should not treat space collaboration as a zero-sum game and should continue collaborations with both these agencies for its needs to use Space for Development and Exploration of Space for the common interest of humanity. Collaboration with one should not be seen as hostility to the other. India must worry about its interests and requirements," opines Professor Mayank Vahiya, Department of Astronomy and Astrophysics, Tata Institute of Fundamental Research.

"The issue is about managing planetary resources. Moon, Mars, etc., are a common heritage to mankind (CHM). We first need to have clarity on this issue before joining any such project, whether the Artemis Accord or China-led group. India should push for establishing a transparent and legally binding mechanism with CHM-focus," Ajey Lele, another space expert, believes.

Reforms Undertaken by India

The global space economy is currently valued at about $360 billion. ISRO's document suggests that India accounts for only about 2% of the space economy while the U.S. captures 40% of the total market share and the U.K. 7%. ISRO aims to increase its market share to 9% by 2030 with the strong participation of private players in the backdrop of progressive reforms.

"Companies like SpaceX, Blue Origin, Virgin Galactic, and Arianespace have revolutionized the space sector by reducing costs and turnaround time, with innovation and advanced technology. In India, however, players within the private space industry have been limited to being vendors or suppliers to the government's space program," a document published by the ISRO in October 2021 reads.

Aiming to attract more private players in the space sector, the Indian government has created the Indian National Space Promotion and Authorization Centre (IN-SPACe) as a single-window, independent nodal agency. The government mandates the INSPACe to promote and enhance the role of private industry players in the space sector through handholding, support, and by providing them with a level playing field. It will also authorize the use of ISRO facilities by private companies, developing Indian satellite systems, and launching rockets/ vehicles developed by the private sector.

On 11 October, Prime Minister Narendra Modi launched the Indian Space Association (ISpA)- the premier industry association of space and satellite companies. ISpA will build global linkages for the Indian space industry to bring critical technology and investments into the country to create more high-skill jobs. The organisation is represented by Bharti Airtel, Larson & Toubro, Nelco (Tata Group), OneWeb, Mapmyindia, Walchandnagar Industries, and Alpha Design Technologies.

These private firms expect support from stable regulatory and policy environment and an exercise has already been initiated by the Department of Space to create new business-friendly policy frameworks in areas like remote-sensing, satellite communication, and launch policies.

The government has authorised public sector company New Space India Ltd (NSIL) to act as the exclusive public-sector aggregator for both demand and supply of space assets/ services on a commercial basis, including imaging and communication transponders, launch services, etc. In its role as a demand aggregator, NSIL will acquire satellites, launch vehicles, and other assets developed by ISRO or the private industry. In its role as a supply aggregator, NSIL will commercialize assets and services like transponder capacity, imaging services, launch capacity, etc., on ISRO-developed satellites and launch vehicles.

ISRO has also been identifying the science and exploration missions where the only the private sector can participate. Experts believe that this step will provide a sense of security to the private sector while making investment decisions in the space sector. The government will also provide some funding support if the private sector invests in selected areas.

The government has already decided that technologies related to platforms such as Polar Satellite Launch Vehicle (PSLV) and Small Satellite Launch Vehicle (SSLV) will be transferred to the private sector shortly.

The government has categorically divided the role of the private and public sector with public sector laboratories in the space sector that will focus on research and development. At the same time, manufacturing and commercial activities will be done by business entities across both the public and private sectors. It will provide significant support to the Indian armed forces as the demand for specific space military assets has been increasing by the day in the backdrop of growing hostilities along the borders.

Following the reforms, several Indian space sector startups have raised venture capital for their planned projects. More than 40 space sector startups and small firms are currently involved in the Indian space segment.

With the lineup of ambitious space missions like Gaganyaan for 2022, Shukrayaan (Venus Mission) for 2025, and possibly an Indian Space Station, the private sector may play a significant role in distributing the burden of ISRO in the near future.

The Space Diplomacy

On 24 September, the Indian Space Research Organisation signed an implementing arrangement to develop a small satellite for Bhutan. ISRO had already placed GSAT-9, also dubbed the South Asia Satellite, in orbit in May 2017, providing space-enabled services to other South Asian countries. Besides assisting Asian neighbours through its remote sensing satellites, India has a program called UNAATI-UNispace Nano- satellite Assembly & Training– which offers two-month training on Nano-Satellite building to international participants. Till now, ISRO has trained 59 officials of 33 countries in two batches under this programme.

ISRO has space cooperative documents at country and space agency levels with 59 countries and five multilateral bodies until June 2021. However, in the changed circumstances when serious concerns are being raised about overcrowding of lower earth orbit, and debris of older satellites, experts have advised India to play a more active role in formulating space regulations.

India must vigorously join the effort to ensure that space is used for the betterment of mankind as a whole and must continue to ensure that the interests of less advanced nations are not compromised when planetary exploration becomes possible. India must stand firm in ensuring that the rich and powerful do not share the resources amongst themselves. Space resources must be used for the well-being of all humanity. India must take this moral stand and ensure that all laws are consistent with this objective.

QUAD LEADERS' SUMMIT: A FORCE FOR GLOBAL GOOD

On September 24, 2021, Prime Minister Narendra Modi, US President Joe Biden, Prime Minister of Australia Scott Morrison, and Japan's Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga had the first-ever in-person Leaders' Summit of the Quad. The Summit followed the leaders' inaugural virtual meeting in March 2021.

What is Quad?

The Quadrilateral Security Dialogue or Quad is "a diplomatic (and strategic) network of four countries—India, Australia, Japan, and the United States—committed to supporting an open, inclusive and resilient region."

The establishment of the Quad goes back to 2007 by the then Prime Minister of Japan Shinzo Abe, Australian Prime Minister John Howard, US Vice President Dick Cheney, and the Prime Minister of India Manmohan Singh. The Quad was discontinued after the withdrawal of Australia during Kevin Rudd's tenure as the Prime Minister. However, during the 2017 ASEAN Summits, the leaders of the four countries (Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Japanese PM Abe, Australian PM Malcolm Turnbull, and US President Donald Trump) agreed to revive the quadrilateral alliance.

The aims of the group include safeguarding their shared interests in the Indo-Pacific region. It complements their other bilateral, regional and multilateral cooperation, including with ASEAN. Quad partners are supporters of ASEAN's centrality, the ASEAN-led architecture and ASEAN's outlook on Indo-Pacific.

The Quad Leaders' Summit built on the extensive engagement by Quad Foreign Ministers, who have met three times. The last Quad Foreign Ministers' Meeting was held virtually on 18 February 2021, preceded by meetings in Tokyo in October 2020 and New York in September 2019.

Take-away from the first in-person Summit

The Quad has a positive, practical agenda to respond to the defining challenges of our time, including critical and emerging technologies, cyber security, climate change, infrastructure, maritime security, countering disinformation, counter-terrorism, and humanitarian assistance and disaster relief. The September Summit was broadly focused on such various global challenges including ways to ensure a free, open, and inclusive Indo-Pacific. The four countries also deliberated and reviewed the COVID-19 vaccine initiative which was launched earlier this March.

Former Japanese Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga, Prime Minister Narendra Modi, US President Joe Biden and Australian Prime Minister Scott Morrison, at the first physical meeting of Quad on 24th September 2021.

1. COVID and Global Health:

In March, Quad leaders launched the Quad Vaccine Partnership to help enhance equitable access to safe and effective vaccines in the Indo-Pacific and the world. Since March, the Quad has taken bold actions to expand safe and effective COVID-19 vaccine manufacturing capacity, donated vaccines, and worked together to assist the Indo-Pacific in responding to the pandemic. The Quad Vaccine Experts Group remains the heart of cooperation, meeting regularly to brief on the latest pandemic trends and coordinate its collective COVID-19 response across the Indo-Pacific by piloting the Quad Partnership COVID-19 dashboard.

The Quad countries have pledged to donate more than 1.2 billion vaccine doses globally in addition to the doses financed through COVAX. Till September 25, 2021 they have collectively delivered over 79 million safe and effective vaccine doses to the Indo-Pacific region.

During the meeting, India announced its decision to resume exports of safe and effective COVID-19 vaccines, including to COVAX, which had begun last month under its Vaccine Maitri programme.The programme is a humanitarian initiative of the government of India to provide COVID-19 vaccine to other countries in the world.

Through $3.3 billion in the COVID-19 Crisis Response Emergency Support Loan program, Japan will continue to help regional countries to procure safe, effective, and quality-assured vaccines. Australia will deliver $212 million in grant aid to purchase vaccines for Southeast Asia and the Pacific. In addition, Australia will allocate $219 million to support last-mile vaccine rollouts and lead in coordinating the Quad's last-mile delivery efforts in those regions. Japan will work with India to enhance key investments of approximately $100 million in the healthcare sector related to COVID-19, including vaccine and treatment drugs.

2. Infrastructure:

Building on the G7's announcement of Build Back Better World (B3W)—an infrastructure partnership focused on digital connectivity, climate, health and health security, and gender equality infrastructure—the Quad will rally expertise, capacity, and influence to strengthen ongoing infrastructure initiatives in the region and identify new opportunities to meet the needs there.

Building on existing leadership from Quad partners on high-standards infrastructure, a senior Quad Infrastructure Coordination Group will be formed which will meet regularly to share assessments of regional infrastructure needs and coordinate respective approaches to deliver transparent, high-standards infrastructure. The group will also coordinate technical assistance and capacity-building efforts, including with regional partners, to ensure that the efforts are mutually reinforcing and complementary in meeting the significant infrastructure demand in the Indo-Pacific.

3. Indo-Pacific Security:

The Quad members have reiterated the need to promote an open rules-based order, rooted in international law to advance security and prosperity and counter threats to both in the Indo-Pacific and beyond The joint statement said that the countries will "continue to prioritize the role of international law in the maritime domain, particularly as reflected in the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), and facilitate collaboration, including in maritime security, to meet challenges to the rules-based maritime order in the East and South China Seas."

4. Critical and Emerging Technologies:

The Quad will launch a Semiconductor Supply Chain Initiative to map capacity, identify vulnerabilities, and bolster supply-chain security for semiconductors and their vital components. Quad partners will also jointly facilitate enabling environments for 5G diversification, including with efforts related to testing and test facilities.

5. Cybersecurity:

To build on the longstanding collaboration on cybersecurity, the Quad will launch new efforts to bolster critical-infrastructure resilience against cyber threats by bringing together the expertise of our nations to drive domestic and international best practices. The Quad aims to advance work between government and industry on driving continuous improvements in areas including adoption and implementation of shared cyber standards; develop secure software; build workforce and talent; and promote the scalability and cybersecurity of secure and trustworthy digital infrastructure.

6. Space and Climate Change:

The Quad will begin space cooperation, in particular, to exchange satellite data, focus on monitoring and adapting to climate change, disaster preparedness, and responding to challenges in shared domains. Sharing such data will help the cooperation to analyse climate-change risks and work towards the sustainable use of oceans and marine resources, better adapt to climate change and to build capacity in other Indo-Pacific states that are at grave climate risk, in coordination with the Quad Climate Working group. The Quad countries will also enable capacity-building in space-related domains in other Indo-Pacific countries to manage risks and challenges.To address the climate crisis with the urgency the August Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change's report findings demand, Quad countries will focus their efforts on the themes of climate ambition, including working on 2030 targets for national emissions and renewable energy, clean-energy innovation and deployment, as well as adaptation, resilience, and preparedness. The Quad will form a Green-Shipping Network, meaning deploying green-port infrastructure and clean-bunkering fuels. The alliance will also establish a Clean-Hydrogen Partnership to strengthen and reduce costs across all elements of the clean-hydrogen value chain. In addition, the Quad countries will convene a Climate and Information Services Task Force and build a new technical facility through the Coalition for Disaster Resilient Infrastructure that will provide technical assistance in small island developing states.

7. People-to-People Exchange and Education:

In order to cultivate next-generation STEM (Science, technology, engineering, and mathematics) talent, the Quad has announced the Quad Fellowship—a first-of-its-kind scholarship program that will develop a network of science and technology experts committed to advancing innovation and collaboration in the private, public, and academic sectors, in their own nations and among Quad countries. The Fellowship will sponsor 100 students per year—25 from each Quad country—to pursue master's and doctoral degrees at leading STEM graduate universities in the United States.

14 NOVEMBER: CHILDREN'S DAY

THE JUVENILE JUSTICE (CARE AND PROTECTION OF CHILDREN) AMENDMENT ACT 2021

EN EXPLAINS

14th of November is celebrated in India as Children's Day. It is a day specially set aside to honor children and celebrate their presence. The day also reinforces the fact that children are the most vulnerable and it is the duty of the state to ensure their security and comfort by guaranteeing them the rights as equal citizens and provide them with special care and protection.

In 1989, world leaders made a historic commitment to the world's children by adopting the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. It has become the most widely ratified human rights treaty in history and has helped transform children's lives around the world. Most countries, including India, have adopted the principles in their laws. In India, children have all rights as equal citizens of India, just as any other adult male or female. India has a robust child rights system that comprises laws such as the Right to Education Act, Protection of Children from Sexual Offences (POCSO) Act, Prohibition of Child Marriage Act, Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, and the Central Adoption Resource Authority (CARA) established under the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act to control and protect child rights.

Juvenile Justice is the most sensitive area of law dealing with the rights and protection of children. Therefore, numerous amounts of legislation have been adopted at all levels, be it national or international.

A juvenile is a person less than 18 years of age. Since Independence, India's juvenile justice system has undergone many changes, keeping up with the needs of the time and circumstances. The system fulfils India's commitment as a signatory to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Hague Convention on Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Inter-country Adoption (1993), and other related international instruments. As a signatory, India is required to undertake all appropriate measures to ensure the rights of children with regard to juvenile justice, care and protection, and adoption.

On 09 August 2021, the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Amendment Act, 2021 was notified. The act replaced the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act 2015, with a view to provide better "care and protection of vulnerable children in light of the prevailing inadequacies in the system."

The amended law addresses issues pertaining to protection of children in a better manner in each district by empowering and entrusting the District Magistrates with more responsibilities. The amendment aims to remove bottlenecks in the implementation of various provisions of the Act and clarifies the scope of certain provisions of the Act.

AMENDMENTS:

Increased role of District Magistrates

District Magistrates were already empowered to review issues related to protection of children. After the amendment, their scope now goes beyond reviewing issues. The amendments include authorizing the District Magistrate, including Additional District Magistrate, to issue adoption orders under Section 61 of the JJ Act, in order to ensure speedy disposal of cases and enhance accountability. The District Magistrates have been further empowered under the Act to ensure smooth implementation of the adoption process as well as garner synergized efforts in favour of children in distress conditions. The amended law addresses issues of delay in adoption as it proposes that appeals on the orders of adoption be referred to the Divisional Commissioner.

Union Women and Child Development Minister, Smriti Irani, while addressing the Lok Sabha in March this year, stated that during an audit of Child Care Institutions (CCIs) by the National Commission for Protection of Child Rights (NCPCR), it was found that 39 per cent CCIs were not registered. Moreover, three-fifth of CCIs had no toilets, one-tenth had no drinking water, 15 per cent homes did not have provisions of separate beds, and one-tenth had no diet plans.

The 2021 amendment places the CCIs under the direct supervision of the DMs making the institutions more accountable. As per the amended provisions of the Act, any Child Care Institution shall be registered after considering the recommendations of the District Magistrate. The DM shall independently evaluate the functioning of District Child Protection Units, Child Welfare Committees, Juvenile Justice Boards, Specialized Juvenile Police Units, Child Care Institutions, etc.

Changes in appointment to Child Welfare Committees

In order to strengthen the Child Welfare Committees, the eligibility parameters for appointment of its members have been redefined. Criteria for disqualification of the CWC members have also been introduced to ensure that only persons capable of rendering quality service with requisite competence and integrity are appointed to CWC. According to the amendment, no person shall be appointed as a member of the Committee unless s/he has a degree in Child Psychology/ Psychiatry/Law/Social Work/ Sociology/Human Health/ Education/ Human Development/ Special Education for differently-abled children. S/he must also have been actively involved in health, education or welfare activities pertaining to children for seven years or must be a practicing professional with a degree in child psychology or psychiatry or law or social work or sociology or human health or education or human development or special education for differently abled children. The Bill adds that no person shall be eligible for selection as a member of the Committee, if s/he has any past record of violation of human rights or child rights, or has ever indulged in child abuse or employment of child labour.

Changes in Definitions

Earlier, there were three categories (petty, serious and heinous) defined under the law which were referred to, while considering the cases of children in conflict with law. However, it was observed that some of the offences did not strictly fall under any of these categories. In the 2015 Act, serious offences included the offences for which the punishment is imprisonment between three to seven years. The 2021 amendment makes an addition and states that serious offences will also include the offences for which the punishment is imprisonment for a term more than seven years and minimum punishment is not prescribed or is less than seven years.

In the 2015 Act, a Child Welfare Officer meant an officer attached to a Children's Home, for carrying out the directions given by the Committee or, as the case may be, the Board with such responsibility as may be prescribed. The new Act amends this to a Child Welfare Officer being an officer attached to a 'child care institution'.
