INDIA TARGETS 2070 FOR NET-ZERO EMISSIONS: CHALLENGES AND IMPLICATIONS

Interview

Dissolving fears that US-China tensions could stand in the way of a substantive global strategy on climate change, the world's two largest emitters of greenhouse gases have pledged to work together on "enhanced climate actions that raise ambition" in the critical decade of the 2020s and "begin to move down a better road". On 10th November, the United States and China released a rare joint declaration on climate change, with the Chinese climage envoy saying "there is more agreement between China and the US than divergence" at the Conference of Parties (COP26), the United Nations Climate Change summit. Earlier, at the beginning of the summit, India announced its commitment to a net-zero goal by the year 2070 and to increasing its non-fossil fuel energy to 500 GW in its energy mix by 2030. In his speech, Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi termed the commitment as 'Panchamrut Ki Saugat' (gift of five elixirs). He enumerated the five elixirs as:

1. India will increase its non-fossil capacity to 500 gigawatt by 2030.

2. India will meet 50% of its energy needs from renewable sources.
3. India will reduce at least one billion tonnes of total projected carbon emissions between now and 2030.
4. India will reduce the economy's carbon intensity to less than 45% by 2030.
5. India will become carbon netural and achieve a net-zero emissions target by 2070.

Meanwhile, Union Minister for Environment, Forest and Climate Change, Shri Bhupendra Yadav delivered the statement on behalf of the BASIC group of countries, comprising Brazil, South Africa, India and China at the COP26 at Glasgow. He affirmed that full effect must be given to implementation of the principles of Equity and Common but Differentiated Responsibilities and Respective Capabilities (CBDR-RC) and that COP 26 must aim for higher global ambition on climate finance and adaptation as well, along with recognition of Parties' differing historical responsibilities and the developmental challenges faced by developing countries, compounded by the COVID-19 pandemic.

Before the 26th Conference of Parties (COP26), the United Nations Climate Change summit, there were debates on whether countries like India and China would commit to net-zero emissions. India's earlier target was to reduce the emissions intensity of its GDP by 33-35 per cent by 2030, compared to 2005 levels with already 24 per cent achieved by 2016. While the west has always painted India as the third-largest emitter after China and the US, India has maintained its per capita emissions are nowhere near the highest emitters.

While India is receiving praises from different quarters for setting this bold climate change mitigation ambition, there are some pertinent questions that have come to the fore. Employment News spoke with two experts to get a grasp of the subject - Dr Vaibhav Chaturvedi, Fellow, CEEW (Council of Energy,

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES RELATED TO STOCK MARKET

Vijay Prakash Srivastava

Savings and investments are integral to any economy. To keep the economy buoyant consumption has to be on the rise but this doesn't undermine the importance of savings and investments. Savings are usually for short term and investments are for long term. In case of savings return is not considered to be of prime importance whereas investments are made to derive as high a return as possible taking into account the risk factor. If somebody puts money in savings or fixed deposit with a bank it carries minimum risk. Gold, real estate and stock market are other avenues of investment of which stock market carries the maximum risk with the expectation of high return.

Since past few months, India's stock market is on a ball. When the pandemic began, BSE Sensex had gone down to 27,000, now it is hovering around 60,000.With the boom in stock market, more and more people are now willing to invest in shares. Retail investors' participation is increasing in stock market at unprecedented rate. As per a news report published in a leading financial daily, new investors are queuing up to put money into equities. Stock exchanges have witnessed more than 34.5 lakh fresh investor additions in the month of September this year and 95.95 lakh in the previous three months as per data made available by Bombay Stock Exchange. With this expansion, addition and due to many other reasons new opportunities of work are being created in India's stock market.

Understanding stock market and its functioning

We all know that trade is essentially an exchange of goods and services between two parties for a price. This trade happens at a market place. There are kirana shops, malls and other places where this trade takes place. We buy services at a hotel or a bank branch or at the outlets of other service providers. Now both goods and services can be bought and sold at e-market places as well. We call it e-shopping. Stock market is a place where financial products like equities, debentures, bonds etc. are bought and sold. Maximum trade happens in shares so it's good to understand what a share is.

Every business needs money. In case of businesses where huge capital is required, the promoters of business, if capable, may not require any money from outside. For others they may rope financial partners, take loans or may float issue of shares which can be on the basis of public or private placement. In case of public issue of shares (also called stock), the shares are listed on

Gati Shakti-Speed of Nation's Progress

Sameera Saurabh

Gati Shakti is the solution to the problem of information-sharing between ministries and government departments at the Centre. It is an infusion of dynamism in the government's infrastructure projects implementation. Gati Shakti is expected to reform infrastructure development in India like the JAM (Jan Dhan-Aadhaar-Mobile) trinity of Jan Dhan Yojana, Aadhaar and mobile communication's impact on the transfer of government benefits to people.

Rationale of Gati Shakti

The Prime Minister has lamented the fact that the subject of infrastructure in our country has not been a priority for most political parties and is not even visible in their manifesto, despite the fact that it is globally accepted that the creation of quality infrastructure for sustainable development is a proven way, which gives rise to many economic activities and creates employment on a large scale.

The Prime Minister has said that due to the wide gap between macro planning and micro implementation, problems of lack of coordination, lack of advance information, thinking and working in silos are leading to hampered construction and wastage of budget. The energy or speed which can also be expressed as Shakti gets divided instead of getting multiplied or enhanced. The PM Gati Shakti National Master Plan, which was first announced at the Red Fort on August 15 this year on the occasion of the 75th Independence Day, will address this gap as working on the basis of the master plan will lead to optimum utilisation of resources. The PM Gati Shakti Master Plan not only brings together the government process and its various stakeholders but also helps to integrate different modes of transportation which is an extension of holistic governance.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi launched the PM Gati Shakti National Master Plan for multi-modal connectivity to expedite and bring infrastructure development on a common path on October 13th, 2021. The Rs 100 lakh-crore Gati Shakti plan envisages a centralised portal comprising all existing and planned infrastructure initiatives of as many as 16 Central ministries and departments for integrated planning and coordinated implementation of infra connectivity projects.

Prime Minister Shri Modi while launching Gati Shakti elaborated upon the steps taken to increase the speed of infrastructure development in India. The first interstate natural gas pipeline in India was commissioned in 1987. After this, till 2014, i.e. in 27 years, a 15,000 km long natural gas pipeline was built. Today, work is going on for a more than 16,000 km long gas pipeline across the country and is targeted to be completed in the next 5-6 years.

The Prime Minister said that in the 5 years before 2014, only 1900 km of railway lines underwent doubling. In the last 7 years, more than 9000 kilometres of railway lines have been doubled. In the 5 years before 2014, only 3000 km of railways were electrified. In the last 7 years, more than 24000 kilometres of railway tracks have been electrified. Before 2014, the metro rail was running on only about 250 km of track. Today the metro has been expanded up to 700 km and work is going on in the 1000 km new metro route. In the five years before 2014, only 60 panchayats could be connected with optical fibre whereas in the last 7 years, we have connected more than 1.5 lakh gram panchayats with optical fibre.

In order to increase the income of the farmers and fishermen of the country, the infrastructure related to processing is also being expanded rapidly. In 2014, there were only 2 Mega Food Parks in the country. Today 19 Mega Food Parks are functioning in the country. Now the target is to take their number to more than 40. There were just 5 waterways in 2014, today India has 13 functional waterways. Turnaround time of the vessels at the ports has come down to 27 hours from 41 hours in 2014. The country has realised the pledge of One Nation One Grid. Today India has 4.25 lakh circuit kilometre power transmission lines compared to 3 lakh circuit kilometers in 2014.

SPOTLIGHT

The Prime Minister has expressed the hope that with the development of quality infrastructure, India can realize the dream of becoming the business capital of the world. He said our goals are extraordinary and will require extraordinary efforts. In realizing these goals, PM Gati Shakti will be the most helpful factor. Just as JAM (Jan Dhan, Aadhar, Mobile) trinity revolutionized the access of government facilities to the people, PM Gati Shakti will do the same for the field of Infrastructure.

The Union Cabinet has approved the PM Gati Shakti National Master Plan, aimed at bringing down the logistics cost in the country by integrating the policymaking in the infrastructure space and bringing all stakeholders in India's infrastructure development together. The plan seeks to end bureaucratic entanglements and break inter-ministerial silos with respect to infrastructure projects.

PM Gati Shakti National Master Plan (GSNMP) is designed to pool the collective power of the government to execute infrastructure projects ahead of time. Elimination of wastage of budgets due to delays and overlapping project executions by different government is the crux of the plan. Extending the spirit of Atmanirbhar Bharat mission - self-reliant India, GSNMP is set to unveil the future of India's employment intensive integrated development for the next 25 years. Presently, the mega projects of Rs.110 trillion marshalled under National Infrastructure Pipeline (NIP) 2020-25 will be brought under the plan. It digitally brings together 16 critical ministries that includes, importantly, among others - Railways, Road, Highways, Petroleum and Gas, Telecom, Power, Shipping and Aviation.

It is a single interactive platform for the coordination, planning of all infrastruc-tures centric projects under NIP breaking the hitherto inter-ministerial silos. The mutual connectivity among ministries will be established through geo-mapping of projects to ensure availability of real-time data in one centralized portal to ensure visibility of progress and position of major projects. The live progress will ensure timely support and interventions in seamless execution of projects minimizing the most common risks of time and cost overruns.

Gati Shakti Scheme targets

1. PM Gati Shakti targets to cut logistic costs, increase cargo handling capacity and reduce the turnaround time
2. The plan aims to lend more power and speed to projects by connecting all concerned departments on one platform. The infrastructure schemes of various ministries and state governments will be designed and executed with a common vision.
3. Gati Shakti joins different departments for the coordinated development of projects from road to railways, aviation to agriculture.
4. The Centre will spend around Rs.50,000 crore to create 500 multi-modal cargo terminals during the next four to five years.
5. PM Gati Shakti plan involves the creation of a common umbrella platform through which infrastructure projects can be planned and implemented in an efficacious manner by way of coordination between various ministries/departments on a real-time basis.

As part of the plan, an Empowered Group of Secretaries (EGoS) headed by the Cabinet Secretary and secretaries of 18 ministries as members, among others, has been set up. It will set out the procedure and definitive framework for synchronization of various activities, and ensure that various initiatives of infrastructure development are part of the common integrated digital platform. Crucially, the group will also look at the interventions required to meet the demand side, in efficiently transporting bulk goods on the requirement of various Ministries like Steel, Coal, Fertilizer, etc. The PM Gati Shakti NMP is intended to break Departmental Silos and bring in more holistic and integrated planning and execution of projects with a view to addressing the issues of multi-modal connectivity and last-mile connectivity.

The Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs has also approved the formation, composition and terms of reference for Network Planning Group (NPG) consisting of heads of Network Planning wing of respective infrastructure ministries and it will assist the EGOS.The NPG will be supported by a technical support unit (TSU) located in the Logistics Division. The government believes this will work towards overall integration of networks, enhancing optimization to avoid duplication of works for holistic development of any region as well as reducing logistics costs through micro-plan detailing.

The TSU will have domain experts from various

INDIA TARGETS 2070 FOR NET-ZERO EMISSIONS ...

Environment and Water), and Dr Anjal Prakash, Research Director, Bharti Institute of Public Policy, Indian School of Business.

Q1: Is it possible for India to achieve the net zero-target by 2070? If yes then what kind of efforts are required?

Dr Vaibhav Chaturvedi: The 2070 net-zero announcement is a bold and ambitious target, but still achievable. Net-zero is essentially about economic transformation, not just a climate agenda. For achieving this ambitious target, India needs to push some key reforms on its energy supply as well as demand side, including reforming the electricity pricing markets, distribution companies, as well as just transition.

Dr Anjal Prakash: In my view, India is already on the path of achieving net-zero. In February this year, India submitted the third biennial report to UNFCCC. The data reported there is promising. Between 2005 and 2016, India's emission intensity of gross domestic product (GDP) decreased by 24 per cent. As a result, the voluntary goal of reducing the emission intensity of GDP by 20-25 per cent from 2005 levels was met much earlier than the target year of 2020. So India is, on many fronts, already ahead in terms of not only targets but also in its policies and programs. PM Modi, by setting the target for 2070, may have bought time from the international community but I think India can achieve net-zero sooner than 2070.

Q2. Can you elaborate the implications of this commitment on industries and on the economy at large?

Dr Vaibhav Chaturvedi: Four out of the five goals are for the 2030 horizon. These mainly focus on pushing renewable energy into the grid. So the near term opportunities lie clearly in the renewable space, with solar panel and wind turbine manufacturing and deployment. The fifth goal, the critically important one, is on the long-term net-zero target. This gives an important long-term signal for the economy and industries, to start planning in a strategic way for this long-term impending future, to understand the oppportunities that could be harnessed in this transition. It is clear that the early movers and proactive businesses will be the ones that will gain from this transition. The short term (2030) and the long term (2070) goals are a package that give a great sense of certainty to the investors and businesses, who should act now to sieze the opportunities in this long term transition process.

Dr Anjal Prakash: I think there would be more opportunities for industries to contribute if we take a path of green growth. It would mean having a balance between the three Ps - people, profit and planet. However, the industries have to look inward and change their strategies to align with the green growth model of development. This needs to be coupled with investing in the protection, sustenance, and improvement of human and environmental resources. This process is essential in aligning business objectives and strategies with the demands of the future. These steps gain added importance in vulnerable sectors such as travel, transport, automotive and tourism, which are more susceptible to climate change impacts than others. An in-house strategic analysis is needed for each industry to understand and manage its triple bottom line and act accordingly.

Achieving net-zero will not be without any challenges. According to estimates given to UNFCCC, India would need approximately $206 billion between 2015 and 2030 for the implementation of its adaptation plans. PM Modi has pledged 1 trillion USD towards adaptation and mitigation. Most of these resources are presently met through domestic sources where people and businesses contribute through taxation.

Q3. Do you think developed world will readily provide one trillion dollar and the technologies to achieve climate goals?

Dr Vaibhav Chaturvedi: I don't think so that the developed world will actually meet this target, which will be unfortunate.

Dr Anjal Prakash: The global north looks for cheaper options such as market-based mechanisms of carbon credit to show progress on net-zero but refrains from sharing technology. Most of the money which has been pledged in the name of adaptation finance is via loan and not grant in aid. India's per capita climate emission is one of the lowest in the world. India needs to develop and decarbonize but we shall do it at our own pace as there is a developmental need that India has to fulfill. It would be hard for India to pursue the path of net-zero without climate finance and so the accountability must be a two-way process. I feel that countries of the global south must come forward and form an alliance with India so that more such voices are coming together for climate finance.

Q4. Will job loss become a major concern? Will the renewable energy sector be able to provide jobs to those who may lose their livelihood due to the transformation?

Dr Vaibhav Chaturvedi: In the near term, we should not be worried about job losses, these are not going to happen. There are more opportunities of job creation thav there will be losses. In the long term, however, there will be job losses in the coal sector, but I don't expect this to happen before 25-30 years from now. Many of the current employed workers would retire by then. Hence a well thought out plan for supporting the rest who are in the final stages of their work life, and ensuring that their children are educated and trained to be gainfully employed in other professions is absolutely critical. Indian policy makers need to plan for the transition and ensure that no vulnerable family loses in this process. But I believe that with advance strategic planning, the job losses will be minimal and we would be able to create an economy of the future. Hence, planning is the key word here.

Dr Anjal Prakash: Climate change is bringing challenges, but it is also an opportunity for the economy to expand and diversify to newer areas which could prove profitable while also helping mitigate the impact of climate change. Some of the sectors where there could be investments are - renewable energy, agriculture, forest produce, sustainability-linked financing, climate services, insurance etc. The other areas could be related to creating climate risk-related products, services and innovation in supply chain management which will entice consumers and shareholders. Climate risks are also opening new avenues and emerging markets that any forward-looking company can cash in on. There would be a shift in the nature of the job but I do not see a job loss in the near and longer future. It needs a different orientation and Indians are better at adapting to the new situation.

Q5. What new sectors will open up in the process of transitioning to greener fuels and what will be the job prospects in those sectors?

Dr Vaibhav Chaturvedi: Hydrogen is going to be a big job creation sector along with the solar and wind value chain from manufacturing to deployment to operations. In addition, the electric vehicle space is going to be interesting from a job perspective. Finally, battery manufacturing is going to be booming for supporting both electric vehicles as well as grid integration of renewable energy. These in my view would be the sectors to watch out for in the next three decades.

Q6. Please elaborate India's pursuit in developing and importing technologies for green fuel.

Dr Vaibhav Chaturvedi: Domestic manufacturing is critical for India's economy. Importing technologies is not the preferred option. Investment in R&D is hence critical. This is only possible if the private sector participates in the process. From this perspective, the announcement of large Indian business conglomerates' entry in the hydrogen production business, as well as solar panel manufacturing business is sort of a path breaking announcement. The role of India's private sector is going to be instrumental in the pursuit of domestic technology development.

Dr Anjal Prakash: It is more environmentally benign and that's why it is called green fuel. India has the capability to work further on developing biomass-based fuel. However, more research and development are needed. We also need collaboration with international players who may have better technology. In the climate negotiations, countries of the global south are asking for technology transfer and if that happens, biofuel or green fuel is one area that would be developed at a much faster rate.

GATI SHAKTI-SPEED OF NATION'S PROGRESS

infrastructure sectors, such as aviation, maritime, public transport, rail, roads and highways, ports, power, pipeline, GIS, ICT, finance/market PPP, logistics, data analytics, among others.

Gati Shakti implementation will also depend on the development of:

1. Stakeholder synergies:

Spread over a long period of 25 years, GSNMP provides to develop 11 industrial corridors, two defense corridors in Tamil Nadu and UP. Coverage of all villages with 4G network, expansion of national highways network up to 2 lakh kilometers, building 220 new airports, helicopters and water aerodromes, 17000 km of new gas pipeline are some of the targets set under the plan.

It intends to rope in state governments and local municipalities to join the platform so that information and data on all infrastructure and connected projects can be shared to draw the synergy of each other. Since the plan is long drawn, a network planning group with representatives from all stakeholder ministries will be set up to meet regularly to ensure coordination and an empowered group can bring about changes to the national master plan, if and when needed. The very thought process and spirit of the plan rests on three strategic pillars - Coordination, Cooperation and Commitment of respective ministries. Plugging of leakages and interdepartmental conflict resolution can be the game changer of the plan.

2. Financing infrastructure:

Drawing from the spirit of GSNMP, the financial sector has to gear up to improve capacity to lend and assist the infrastructure projects and their satellite ancillaries. Capacity building will need better risk management skills, enhanced capital base, speeding up of debt resolution processes and added scalability of risk appetite of banks and non-banks to participate in the changed business environment - post pandemic.

3. Status of credit information:

Inability to read the riskiness of infrastructure loans is mainly due to information asymmetry in the credit market. Adequate qualitative, near-live information about state of the borrowers/ projects can mitigate risks to a large extent as timely interventions will be possible. It can largely address the issue of 'adverse selection' and 'moral hazard'. Sharing of credit information by a credit institution to a central agency is in the public interest and globally used as one of its objective to mitigate credit risk.

The way forward:

The project is expected to bring about conceptual change visualised by PM Modi. The ministries will no longer be working in silos and integrate the planning and designing of projects with a holistic vision. This will enhance the ease of doing business for many and bring about economic growth, faster planning, and execution of projects. The National Master Plan is therefore, expected to enhance India's global competitiveness through building next-generation infrastructure and seamless movement of information and resources. Digitisation and digital technologies enabled by resilient wireline and wireless broadband connectivity will be a cornerstone for the work to be done under the ambitious Gati Shakti - National Master Plan for Multi Modal Connectivity. The EGOS has been mandated to review and monitor the implementation of the PM Gati Shakti National Master Plan (NMP) to ensure logistics efficiency. It is empowered to prescribe framework and norms for undertaking any subsequent amendments to the NMP.

Gati Shakti was launched by the Hon'ble PM on the auspicious day of Ashtami, the day of worshiping Shakti thereby signifying that the speed of nation's progress is also getting new Shakti. The PM Gati Shakti National Master plan will take the confidence of India to new heights and the Masterplan will give impetus to 21st century India.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES RELATED TO STOCK MARKET

stock exchange. When a company issues shares for the first time it's called initial public offering (IPO for short).Any holder of such shares may sell her shares in the stock market. Face value of a share is decided by the floating company, and it may be sold at a justifiable premium. To illustrate, nearly a year ago, Government of India owned Mazagon Dock Shipbuilders Limited came out with its public issue of shares of face value Rs. 10 at a premium of Rs. 125 to Rs. 135 and the same is now being traded around Rs. 270 which will be called its market price at a particular time. Market value of a share is a completely different thing. It is the price at which trade of a share happens and it may keep fluctuating. The price of share in the stock market is determined by the performance and growth prospects of the related company and how investors perceive it.

Trade of every share happens at either of Bombay Stock Exchange (BSE) and National Stock Exchange (NSE). Now all the shares are traded electronically and every company issues its shares in dematerialised form. National Securities Depositories Limited (NSDL) and Central Depository Services (India) Limited (CDSL) are two agencies providing depository services in the country. These are the custodians of all the shares issued. When a trade happens ownership of shares is transferred from seller to the buyer. There are broking agencies who facilitate the trade of shares. They take the order of buying or selling shares from their clients which has to be executed on BSE or NSE. Trade order may be placed at the website or app of the broking agency, or by personal visit or over phone.

Roles: For many roles in stock market no special qualification is required. For example in a broking firm there are people who simply attend phone calls to receive trade orders and enter these to the trading platform. Similarly there are customer service roles wherein one is required to deal with the issues or concerns raised by clients or provide guidance to people which may be in person, over phone or through chats. One may get such roles with simple qualifications of 10+2 or graduation, with good communication skills and knowledge of working on computers. For various other roles you need specific knowledge and expertise. Few of such roles have been described below. Since mutual funds also invest in stocks, the opportunities described here may also be available with mutual fund companies.

Finance/Accounts Manager: The business of stock market is the business of money. Broking houses need people to manage the inflow and outflow of money and maintain proper accounts. Graduates and postgraduates in Commerce (B.Com/M.Com) are considered suitable to work in accounts and finance department of a broking firm.

Equity Researcher: Equity researchers make detailed study of companies whose stocks are traded on platforms like National Stock Exchange or Bombay Stock Exchange. The purpose of this study, is to understand the nature of business & performance of the company, its profitability and the potential it offers. Based on the outcomes of such study decision to hold, buy or sell the stock is taken. The study can be also sector wise covering sectors like steel, petrochemicals, fertilizers, pharmaceuticals, banking, information technology, business process outsourcing, gas, shipping, aviation etc. Each equity researcher may be assigned one or more sectors to keep a close watch and make recommendations as to which sectors are doing well or are likely to do well in short and long term. Such recommendations are used to decide about buying or selling scrips belonging to specific sectors. Researchers may also be required to find out comparative performance within particular sector to learn which companies are doing better than others, in order to decide about investing in them or take out the money already invested. Every big broking firm and mutual fund company has a team of equity researchers.

Technical Analysts: Technical analysis in the parlance of stock market refers to mathematical and scientific approach to develop a view on the trend in stock market or on a particular stock. Past patterns are put on charts with the objective of exploring patterns in future, long, medium or short term. Technical analysis is used mostly for short term predictions.

Portfolio Manager: There are many investors who instead of completely deciding on their own leave their investment decisions to Portfolio Managers or Portfolio Management agencies who charge a fee for their services and/or a commission from the profits made. The job of a Portfolio Manager is to understand the investment objective and time horizon by talking to the clients and then decide investment strategies. Few investors may desire quick returns even with high risk while others may prefer moderate returns with low or moderate risk.

Fund Manager: Fund Managers are required to play a bigger role particularly in mutual fund companies and pension funds. They decide the components of a particular mutual fund scheme depending on the nature of the scheme. For example in case of a pure equity fund they have to decide which shares are to be bought/sold and in what quantity. Similarly decision has also to be taken about selling of shares. Monitoring dividend income and planning for investment of such income is another functional area for them. The purpose is to maximize value of the fund which reflects in per unit value. With some experience equity researchers can grow into fund managers. Key result area of a fund manager is the return offered by the fund managed by her. Better performing fund managers are in great demand in the industry.

In addition to broking firms, Foreign Institutional Investors, Domestic Institutional, investment wings of Insurance companies, pension funds appoint equity analysts/ researchers, technical analysts and fund managers.

Qualifications that would help you to make a career in stock market

There are a number of qualifications which may prove useful for making a career in stock market. A higher qualification in management such as Masters of Business Administration or postgraduate diploma in management (PGDM) with specialization in finance is now a very popular qualification. Chartered Accountants, Chartered Financial Analysts and Cost Accountants have good opportunities to work in stock market. For working in financial planners' role a certification in financial planning with or without the qualifications mentioned before is desirable. Opportunities also exist for those qualified in risk management, business analytics, data science, big data analytics and of course information technology is now heavily being used in stock markets. There are opportunities for programmers, software developers, database managers and information security experts. Financial Technology has emerged as a new discipline which carries a scope also to work with stock exchanges, broking firms and mutual fund companies etc.

National Institute of Securities Market, near Mumbai has many useful courses which may help in getting a stock market related career role. These are-Postgraduate Diploma in Management (Securities Markets), Post Graduate Program (Portfolio Management/Investment Advisory / Research Analysis), LL.M. program in investment and securities Laws (for Law graduates), Post Graduate Certificate in Management (Data Science in Financial Markets) and Post Graduate Certificate in Securities Markets (PGCSM).

Bombay Stock Exchange has a subsidiary- BSE Institute Limited or Bsevarsity to offer classroom and online training courses related to stock markets. Classroom programmes include Post Graduate Diploma in Global Financial Markets and Post Graduate Diploma in Predictive Analytics (Data Analytics). Online courses offered by Bsevarsity are Comprehensive Investing Strategies for Capital Markets, Executive Program in Risk Management, Certificate Program on Stock Market (Advanced Level) (CPSM), Capital Markets Bootcamp and Introduction to Wealth Management + Mutual Funds Investment.

Similarly National Stock Exchange has a NSE Academy which conducts Post Graduate Programmes like PGCM Investment Banking, PG Programme on Financial Analytics, PGP Certification Programme in Financial Technolgies, PG Diploma in Financial Markets. In our country stock markets are regulated by Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI). If you want to work with SEBI, the most common route is joining them as grade 'A' officer for which vacancies are advertised almost every year. These vacancies exist in general as well as specialised streams. For general stream one should have a Master's degree in any discipline or Bachelor's Degree in Law, Bachelor's degree in Engineering or qualification of Chartered Accountancy/ Chartered Financial Analyst/ Company Secretary / Institute of Cost and Works Accountant of India. Specialists' roles are available in legal, information technology, engineering and research streams. For research stream Master's Degree in Statistics/Economics/Commerce/Business Administration (Finance)/Econometrics is required. The selection happens on the basis of written examination (preliminary and main) and interview.

If you're interested in pursuing a stock market related career, you shouldn't be dependent upon just newspapers advertisements as in many cases particularly by private firms, people are sourced through other means. Those possessing required qualifications/skillset may submit their resume to such firms to be considered for existing or upcoming opportunities. You should also have your profile at major job portals.

Skill India Reaches Out to Change Lives

Working as a plumber in a multi-storey building in Noida, Amroha's Momeen was doing good work. He had been working for the builder for quite some time. But suddenly the contract of the builder ended and Momeen's work also got halted. He remained unemployed for the next two-three months. It was then someone told him that he could learn plumbing under Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Skill India initiative and earn a certificate for it.

Momeen thought it over for a few days. He rationalized that he already knew plumbing well. If he could get a certificate too, he might find a job in a company. This could end the uncertainty associated with working as a daily-wage worker. Thus, he decided to enroll in the Skill India course for plumbing which has a duration of six months.

After enrolling in the course, Momeen realized that though he knew most of the practical aspects of plumbing, he did not know the terminology of the field and some of its engineering-related aspects well enough. Doing the course helped him gain expertise in these areas too and gave him the confidence of calling himself a skilled plumber. He was happy and excited to receive the certificate.

The private institute in Noida where Momeen had enrolled himself organized a campus placement drive at the end of the course. There, a realty company from Faridabad had come to recruit a plumber. The company's executive interviewed Momeen who knew all the terminology well enough by now. He easily got selected for the vacancy and got a higher salary package than he expected.

One big reason behind his selection was that Momeen already had experience in the field. It has been more than a year now and Momeen firmly believes that the 6-month Skill India course has changed his life forever.

Momeen is not alone. Skill training by private players is changing people's lives too.

Skill Training by Tata Strive

A skill development initiative of Tata Trusts, Tata Strive aims to change lives of 1 million people by 2022. Right now, it is training 3 lakh people for jobs in various Tata companies. It is in the process of upscaling and soon it will be training 7 lakh aspirants in different skills. Till September 2021, 7.5 lakh people have already been trained by Tata Strive.

Sirisha Jetti of Nagole, Telangana, is one of the graduates of Tata Strive who is breaking many stereotypes in the society as a woman electrician. Sirisha's father is an auto driver. Her family landed into a deep financial crisis in 2016 and her father found himself struggling to pay even the rent of the house.

Sirisha realized that she needs to learn a skill and find a job soon. She enrolled in an assistant electrician's course at Tata Strive. It was not an easy road. She had to travel 70 km daily from her home in Nagole to the centre. But the course did teach her the necessary theory and practical training to help her become a successful electrician today. At 19, she earns a salary of Rs 12,000 per month as an assistant electrician in Hotel Taj Krishna in Hyderabad.

Besides helping her family, Sirisha has also enrolled in a B.Tech degree. "I firmly believe that the skill development initiative of Tata Strive has improved my career prospects considerably", she says.

Anita Ranjan, Tata Strive CEO, says, "We are working with young people, most of whom are economically and socially disadvantaged, to provide them with necessary skill sets and personality training as required, and link them to livelihoods. Besides helping them find jobs, we also help them become entrepreneurs."

GROUND ZERO

Mahindra Pride School is also Changing Lives

Manikandan Palani used to sell fish by the roadside. His sales were highly unpredictable. His family had to sell their home because his income was never enough. It was then Palani enrolled himself in the Mahindra Pride School where he worked on his communication and interpersonal skills, and also got some IT training. Today, he is working as a software development trainee in Zoho.

Skill development initiatives not only change the live of one individual. It uplifts the living conditions of an entire family, and an entire generation of the skilled person.

Sai Prasad Nandala did not have it easy too. He is the son of a vegetable vendor and also had a stammer. The poverty and stammer crushed his confidence throughout his childhood. But he attended soft skills training at Mahindra Pride School, and is now working as a content reviewer at Wipro!

All skill training programs offered by Mahindra Pride School include a compulsory module on soft skills that covers grooming, basic computer skills, and spoken English skills to make candidates employable.

Sheetal Mehta, Senior VP of Mahindra Group, says, "Before the COVID-19 pandemic, Mahindra Pride School mostly had a 100% placement track-record every year where our candidates were picked up by reputed organizations. We offer a 90-day training course and train about 5,500 to 6,000 individuals annually. The average starting salary package of our course graduates is around Rs 11,000 per month at present. The best salary packages our students have got were offered by UD Trucks in Japan, which picked up 65 of our students for more than Rs 1 lakh per month."

Skilled Women are Breaking Stereotypes

Gender equality in the workforce is still a far away goal but more and more women are now entering professions that have traditionally been considered men's domains. For example, the job of a 'lineman.' Like all electrical engineering jobs and heavy-duty industries, this job is largely considered to be reserved for men. Two women in Telangana have created history by becoming the first line-women in the state.

Babburi Sirisha did the Electrician course from the ITI. She wanted to apply for a vacancy of the 'lineman' at Telangana Southern Power Distribution Corporation Limited (TSSPDCL). But women were not eligible to apply for the post. TSSPDCL rationalized that this job requires heavy-duty and rigorous activities like climbing 18-feet electricity poles frequently. These activities were stereotypically considered more dangerous for women, the so-called weaker sex.

Sirisha challenged this archaic rule in the Delhi High Court in 2019 arguing that women did deserve a fair chance to apply for the post. After a year of legal battle, Sirisha won. She and eight other women applied for the vacancy. Sirisha and another woman Vaankudothu Bharathi cleared the exam to become the first line-women of Telangana. They also cleared the physical exam where they were required to climb the pole in less than a minute.

Skill India drive is for everyone. Take a skill development course today and write a new future!

Remembering Birsa Munda

A Tribal Folk Hero and Freedom Fighter

When towards the closing years of 19th century, the Adivasis rose in protest against the British rulers, it was certainly not an unexpected event. Birsa Munda's personality grew and developed in such a way in the existing turmoil in Chhotanagpur that the different strands of contemporary life in the plateau where inextricably inter-woven in it. At the comparatively young age of 25, Birsa had acquired an in-depth knowledge of the social and economic exploitation of the adivasis. Birsa's, striking personality and his revolt, which he termed 'Ulgulan', was the outcome of a long-continuing historical predicament.

Birsa Munda was born in a Munda family and he realised at an early age that every aspect of Munda life, social, religious and economic had become subject to exploitation. As a consequence, the Birsa Movement was multi-dimensional and Birsa tried to preserve the ethos and identity of the Mundas. The Adivasis had begun to suspect that the missionaries would not be able to provide relief from the injustice meted out to them by the authorities, zamindars, jagirdars and thekedars. The tribals also began to feel that at some point there was a collusion between the exploiters and the missionaries. At the cross roads of dissatisfaction and disillusion the Mundas felt the need for a leader and this leadership was provided by Birsa Munda. The adolescent years of Birsa's life and his personality presented sufficient indication that he would be able to provide the exploited and deprived tribals with relief. Birsa was 20 years old when he began his Movement.

Birsa spent four years from 1886 to 1890 in the school at Chaibasa. During this long period, Birsa 's character and individuality developed and were shaped.

While staying in the hostel, Birsa had sufficient opportunities to listen to the sermons of the priests. As Birsa was bold and fearless, he often questioned the priests and engaged in debates with them. A sermon by Rev. Nottrot left a deep impression on Birsa. Ref. Nottrot was talking about the kingdom of God and he said that if Mundas accepted christianity they may enter the kingdom of God even on this earth. The sermon disturbed Birsa and compelled him to think about the atrocities, the Mundas were being forced to endure. Perhaps. Nottrot's sermon inducted the seeds of revolt against injustice and helped in making Birsa a rebel.

When at the age of 15-16 Birsa left the hostel at Chaibasa, he had already become a mature, thinking individual. He had developed an insight into the mechanism of exploitation. The constant assault on Munda culture, society and religion had filled Birsa with deep anguish and anger. The background of the Birsa Movement had begun to adopt a concrete shape. Birsa had become sufficiently equipped to assume the unavoidable role of an activist.

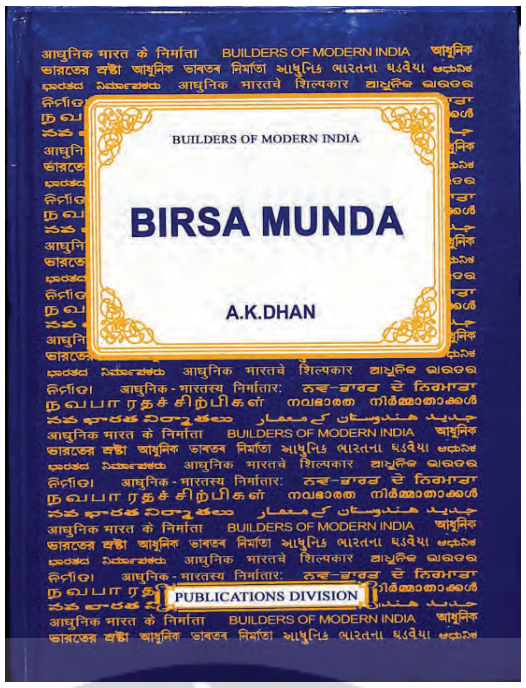

Birsa had begun to criticize Rev. Nottrot and other priests. This resulted in Birsa's expulsion from the school and hostel. After this incident, Birsa began to distrust and to be indifferent towards the missionaries.

The Birsa Movement was antagonistic to the British not only because they supported the zamindars and the jagirdars, he also believed that as foreigners the British had no right to rule over India. Birsa also strongly objected to the right to call the Mundas dishonest as the Mundas had not harmed anyone. Missionaries them-selves, Birsa felt, were indulging in harmful activities against the Mundas.

The local Munda leaders or Sardars were convinced that Birsa possessed an inherent capacity to influence and to awaken the masses. They began to persuade Birsa to become a permanent part of their movement. During this phase of the Sardar Movement of the Mundas, Birsa had begun to oppose both the missionaries and the rulers. Birsa had indeed listened attentively to the sermons of the priests. The occasional criticism of the ancient Munda religion by these priests was painful and intolerable to Birsa. Birsa disliked the influence of any other religion upon the ancient Munda religion. Inspite of the fact, Birsa's own family had accepted Christianity and that a substantial number of the leaders of the Sardar movement were Christians, Birsa, like many others, was becoming disenchanted with the missionaries and the rulers alike.

In 1890 itself, Birsa went to Bandgaon which is situated between Khunti and Chakradharpur. At that time Bandgaon was the domain of an influential zamindar Jagmohan Singh. Birsa came in contact with Anand who was working as a clerk with Jagmohan Singh.

Anand possessed a knowledge of Hindu religion and Puran. He studied religious books pertaining to Hindu religion. Anand provided Birsa with substantial knowledge about Vaishnavism and instructed him about its rituals. In the region surrounding Bandgaon the Vaishnav sect was prominent. Birsa spent about three years with Anand and his brother Sukhnath. During this period Birsa began wearing the sacred thread, worshiping the Tulsi plant and putting on sandal wood mark on his forehead. Stories about the heroes and warriers told in Ramayana and Mahabharata strengthened Birsa's resolve to fight against injustice.

The uprooting of the atrocities being committed on the Mundas by the zamindars and jagirdars became an important part of Birsa's mission. At this time Birsa developed a strong resentment against the missionaries, the rulers as well as against the zamindars and jagirdars. Birsa learnt and was able to memorise certain 'Mantras' while in the company of Anand. By reciting these mantras he later endeavoured to eradicate the ills and sorrows of the adivasis.

One significant incident took place while Birsa was in the forest with some friends. It seemed that a flash of lightning came from the sky and enveloped Birsa's entire body. Birsa's complexion and colour suddenly changed from dark brown to yellow. This incident confirmed Birsa 's identity as an unusual and god-gifted person. Birsa's friends talked about this incident and Birsa's prestige multiplied. Following these incidents Birsa 's behaviour underwent noticeable changes and he became instrumental in curing the physical ills of the people. Crowds from different villages began to gather around Birsa. During that period Birsa used to eat only once during the day and spend a great deal of time in worship and meditation.

Birsa's fame spread to distant areas of Chhotanagpur. The crowds of people who desired to see him began to grow with each passing day. People began to believe that Birsa was endowed with super-natural powers. Huge unprecedented stream of people began to march to Chalkad to listen to Birsa 's discourses. Birsa made a small platform for himself under a large mango tree near his house. He surrounded the small platform with sacred threads. He used to address the people from this platform.

Birsa began to be known as 'Dharti Abba' or the father of the earth. This name was given to Birsa by Birsa himself. The constant and continuing overgrowing crowd of people assembling at Chalkad at last caught the eye of the rulers. The significant aspect was that the crowd was not made up of Mundas alone but also comprised other tribal communities and even non-tribals. People no longer came to Birsa only to get cured of their physical Adivasis but also to listen to his religious and political discourses. Birsa's influence could be seen not only in the Adivasis but also on the indigenous non-tribals.

By 1895 Birsa was fully transformed into a leader of a religious movement and this movement had begun to acquire political undertones. The leaders of the Sardar movement who had become disheartened after their separation from the missionaries also began to feel that someone like Birsa with his powerful and popular image, who was even being considered as 'Bhagwan' by a substantial number of people would be able to infuse new life into their dying and dormant movement. Birsa's fame was spreading like wild fire and the amazing increase in the volume of crowd coming for an audience with him had naturally attracted the attention of the colonial rulers.

It was during the later half of 1895 that the gravity of the situation dawned on the rulers. On 6th August 1895, the local chowkidars filed a report in Tamar Police Station that a Munda named Birsa has proclaimed the end of British rule. The same day a head constable was sent to inspect and find the nature of the crowd gathering there. The constable reached on the evening of 8th August and he arrested Birsa on the morning of 9th August. The crowd assembled there Birsa and the constable had to go back without completing his mission. This was an incredible incident. Those were the times when a single constable could arbitrarily decide the fate of an entire village without any protest. He represented the might of the colonial rulers.

After this, the expedition to arrest Birsa Munda gathered momentum. On 13th August there was another attempt made to take Birsa into custody with the help or Paulus, the priest at Kochang village. The attempt did not succeed. These attempts to arrest Birsa Munda created a great deal of anger in the adjacent villages.

It was on the morning of 26th August when it was raining heavily that Meyers arrested Birsa. On the whole, the arrest was peaceful and Meyers with his group returned to Bandgaon. Following this the authorities decided to put Birsa on trial. Birsa was brought to Khunti for the trial. In Khunti also huge crowds began to assemble. Shortly after the verdict of the court Birsa was transferred to Hazaribagh jail. A little before the completion of the duration of his imprisonment he was brought back to Ranchi jail where he was released from prison on 30th November, 1897 and was taken to his paternal village Chalkad.

Birsa was spending his days of confinement in Hazaribagh jail. A mere chronology of incidents is insufficient to reveal his personality and thought. A revolutionary is guided and controlled by elements which are not easily analysed. The background of tyranny and the urge for liberty had given to Birsa - an ordinary Munda young man used to grazing goats and eating rice mixed with water - an unquenchable thirst for removing the yoke of colonial rulers. He ultimately challenged the might of the British empire in whose colonies the sun never set.

The Birsa Movement was different from the series of uprisings against the British which continued from 1790 onwards. The Birsa Movement has an enduring human quality about it. Birsa Movement was not limited to physical level alone, it was a complete revolution, it took into account the entire history of the Mundas, their enduring culture, religion and ethos. It was like a re-awakening. It is for this that Birsa is placed in the front line of freedom fighters of India.

Indeed, Birsa left an indelible impression not only on tribal society but also on the exploiters. What distinguished him from others who were leaders of uprisings against the British, is the fact that he became a symbol and icon of nuances that envelop the entire society in Chhotanagpur. Religious purification and social awareness were integral ingredients of his movement. Birsa raised his voice and flexed his muscles culminating in an armed struggle against the marauding outsiders and their protectors, the colonial masters. He also dreamt of recreating the grandeur and wonder of ancient tribal culture and made an attempt to underline the distinctive features of the ancient religion of the Munda. Birsa was a visionary and he tried to remove external influences tarnishing the purity of the ancient Munda social structure.

OF THE PEOPLE, FOR THE PEOPLE, BY THE PEOPLE

CONSTITUTION DAY

26 November marks Constitution Day, also known as 'Samvidhan Divas'. Starting 2015, this day is observed every year to commemorate the adoption of the Constitution of India and to promote Constitution values among citizens.

The Indian Constitution, the longest of any sovereign nation in the world, provides a comprehensive framework to guide and govern the country, keeping in view her social, cultural and religious diversity. It establishes the main organs - executive, legislature and judiciary, defining their powers, demarcating their responsibilities and regulating the inter-se relationship. It inter alia lays down the basic structure of governance and the relationship between the government and the people.

The Constitution came into force on January 26, 1950 after 2 years 11 months and 18 days of hardwork.

Formation of the Constitution

The Constitution of India was framed by a Constituent Assembly set up under the Cabinet Mission Plan of 1946. Its members were chosen by indirect election by the members of the Provincial Legislative Assemblies, according to the scheme recommended by the Cabinet Mission. The arrangement was:

(i) 292 members were elected through the Provincial Legislative Assemblies
(ii) 93 members represented the Indian Princely States
(iii) 4 members represented the Chief Commissioners' Provinces.

The total membership of the Assembly thus was to be 389. However, as a result of the partition under the Mountbatten Plan of June 3, 1947, a separate Constituent Assembly was set up for Pakistan and representatives of some Provinces ceased to be members of the Assembly. As a result, the membership of the Assembly was reduced to 299.

The Constituent Assembly met for the first time in New Delhi on December 9, 1946 in the Constitution Hall which is now known as the Central Hall of Parliament House, and elected Dr Sachhidanand Sinha, the oldest member of the Assembly as the Provisional President. On December 11, 1946, the Assembly elected Dr Rajendra Prasad as its permanent Chairman.

On August 29, 1947, the Constituent Assembly set up 13 committees for framing the Constitution which provides a comprehensive and dynamic framework to guide and govern the country, including a Drafting Committee under the Chairmanship of Dr B.R. Ambedkar. On the basis of the reports prepared by these committees, a draft of the Constitution was prepared by a seven-member Drafting Committee.

During this period, it held eleven sessions covering a total of 165 days. Of these, 114 days were spent on the consideration of the Draft Constitution. While deliberating upon the draft Constitution, the Assembly moved, discussed and disposed of as many as 2,473 amendments out of a total of 7,635 tabled.

The Constitution was signed in December 1949

The Constitution of India was adopted on November 26, 1949 and the Hon'ble members appended their signatures to it on January 24, 1950. In all, 284 members actually signed the Constitution. The Constitution of India came into force on January 26, 1950. On that day, the Assembly ceased to exist, transforming itself into the Provisional Parliament of India until a new Parliament was constituted in 1952.

Fundamental Rights and Duties

The people of India are the ultimate custodians of the Constitution. It is in them that sovereignty vests and it is in their name that the Constitution was adopted. The Constitution empowers the citizen, but the citizens too empower the Constitution - by following it, by adhering to it, by protecting it, and by persevering to make it more meaningful with words and deeds.

The Constitution makes it mandatory to protect and promote freedoms, and to assure every citizen a decent standard of living. It makes a strong commitment to promoting the wellbeing of all citizens without any discrimination on the grounds of caste, creed, community or gender. Part III of the Indian Constitution guarantees six fundamental rights to Indian citizens. While these fundamental rights are universal, the Constitution provides for some exceptions and restrictions.

When the Constitution was adopted, there were no provisions regarding Fundamental Duties to the Citizens. The Fundamental Duties of citizens were added to the Constitution by the 42nd Amendment in 1976, upon the recommendations of the Swaran Singh Committee that was constituted by the Government. The Committee suggested that steps needed to be taken to ensure that the individual did not overlook his duties while in the exercise of his Fundamental Rights.

By way of the 42nd Constitution (Amendment) Act, 1976, a Code of Ten Fundamental Duties for citizens was added. Fundamental duties are intended to serve as a constant reminder to every citizen that while the constitution specifically conferred on them certain Fundamental Rights, it also requires citizens to observe certain basic norms of democratic conduct because rights and duties are correlative. The inclusion of Fundamental Duties brought our Constitution in line with Article 29 (1) of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and with provisions in several modern Constitutions of other countries.

The Fundamental duties are essentially taken from the Indian tradition, mythology, religions and practices. Essentially these were the duties that are the codification of tasks integral to the Indian way of life. Originally ten fundamental duties were listed. Later on, by virtue of 86th Constitution Amendment in the year 2002, 11th duty was added.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

One of the features of the Constitution is that it is neither rigid nor flexible. India adopted the combination of the 'theory of fundamental law', which underlies the written Constitution of the United States with the 'theory of parliamentary sovereignty' as in the United Kingdom, the Constitution of India vests constituent power upon the Parliament subject to the special procedure laid down therein.

The Constitution of India provides for three categories of amendments. Firstly, those that can be effected by Parliament by a simple majority such as that required for the passing of any ordinary law. Secondly, those amendments that can be effected by Parliament by a prescribed 'special majority'; and Thirdly, those that require, in addition to such 'special majority', ratification by at least one half of the State Legislatures. The last two categories being governed by Article 368, which is the specific provision in the Constitution dealing with the power and the procedure for the amendment of the Constitution.

Modernisation of a Constitution and amending it as per the situation is essential in a democracy to protect the rights of citizens and to ensure that no injustice happens. These factors have made our Constitution a living document rather than a closed and static rulebook. On the journey of making the Indian Constitution modern, our constitution was amended on May 10, 1951 for the first time adding special provisions for the socially economically and educationally backward population of the country.

The original text of the Constitution contained 395 articles in 22 parts and eight schedules. The number of articles has since increased to 470 due to 105 amendments. Some of the important amendments have been as follows:

24th Constitutional Amendment Act, 1971

According to this amendment, "Parliament may in exercise of its constituent power amend by way of addition, variation or repeal any provision of this Constitution in accordance with the procedure laid down in this article" (Article 368).

42nd Constitutional Amendment Act, 1976

This amendment proposed to amend the Preamble to spell out expressly the words "SOVEREIGN SOCIALIST SECULAR DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC" in place of "SOVEREIGN DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC" and replace "unity of the Nation" with "unity and integrity of the Nation". It also proposed to specify the fundamental duties of the citizens and make special provisions for dealing with anti-national activities, whether by individuals or associations.

44th Constitutional Amendment Act, 1978

Since the Right to Property created a lot of problems in the way of attaining the goal of socialism and equitable distribution of wealth, under this amendment, the Right ceased to be a fundamental right. However, it was given express recognition as a legal right with the provision that no person shall be deprived of his property save in accordance with law.

61st Constitutional Amendment Act, 1988

This amendment brought a change in the voting age in India bringing it down from 21 years to 18 years.

73rd Constitutional Amendment Act, 1992

This amendment proposed to add a new Part relating to Panchayats in the Constitution to provide for among other things, Gram Sabha in a village or group of villages; constitution of Panchayats at village and other level(s); direct elections to all seats in Panchayats at the village and intermediate level, if any; reservation of seats for the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes in proportion to their population for membership of Panchayats and office of Chairpersons in Panchayats at each level; and reservation of not less than one-third of the seats for women.

86th Constitutional Amendment Act, 2002

A new article 21A was inserted below Article 21 which made Right to Education a Fundamental Right for children in the range of 6-14 years. The article reads:

"The State shall provide free and compulsory education to all children of the age of six to fourteen years in such manner as the State may, by law, determine." A new Fundamental Duty under Article 51 A was added - " It shall be the duty of every citizen of India who is a parent or guardian to provide opportunities for education to his child or ward between the age of six and fourteen years."

101st Constitutional Amendment Act, 2017

This amendment made provision for the Goods and Services Tax to be levied on supplies in the course of Inter-State trade or commerce which would be collected by the Government of India and be apportioned between the Union and the States in the manner provided by Parliament by law on the recommendations of the Goods and Services Tax Council.

103rd Constitutional Amendment Act, 2019

Under this amendment, special provision for the advancement of any economically weaker sections (EWS) citizens related to their admission to educational institutions including private educational institutions, whether aided or unaided by the State was created by way of 10 per cent reservation.

EN EXPLAINS

The Constitution of India is the longest written constitution in the world containing 395 Articles, 22 Parts and 12 Schedules. It was not typeset or printed but was handwritten and calligraphed in both English and Hindi. It was entirely handcrafted by the artists of Shantiniketan under the guidance of Acharya Nandalal Bose, with the calligraphy texts done by Prem Behari Narain Raizada in Delhi.

The original copies of the Constitution of India are kept in special helium-filled cases in the Library of the Parliament of India. Each part of the Constitution begins with a depiction of a phase or scene from India's national history. At the beginning of each part of the Constitution, Nandalal Bose has depicted a phase or scene from India's national experience and history. The artwork and illustrations (22 in all), rendered largely in the miniature style, represent vignettes from the different periods of the history of the Indian subcontinent, ranging from Mohenjodaro in the Indus Valley, the Vedic period, the Gupta and Maurya empires and the Mughal era to the national freedom movement.
